Message from the Collection Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This special issue aims to bring together the emerging research on different transport models to address current and future transportation, transport economics, traffic demand, and transportation resilience. The next goal of the special issue is the expanding research on public transport systems such as shared mobility systems and transit services. We expect the submissions to make a step forward in our understanding of sustainable public transport services regarding public welfare and social needs. This special issue encourages submissions of original research articles that report significant research contributions on the following topics:

- Transport demand and travel behavior
- Route choice models and traffic assignment
- Shared mobility systems
- Public transport and interaction with other modes
- Social welfare through public transportation
- Game theory and social choice models in transportation systems
- Clean transport systems
- Transport information
- Resilience and recovery of transportation networks
- Freight transport models
