Message from the Guest Editors

The pursuit of carbon neutrality is poised to profoundly influence the sustainable development trajectories of economies and industries worldwide, spanning both developed and developing nations. Over the next three decades, a plethora of issues will demand rigorous examination and deliberation, offering insights valuable to policymakers and investors alike. This Special Issue seeks to serve as a platform for global scholars to exchange perspectives on this imperative, aiming to drive contributions toward fostering sustainable development on a global scale.

The call for papers covers various topics that include, but are not limited to, green economic growth, carbon finance, energy finance, climate finance, green finance, green bonds, and environmental finance.
