Message from the Guest Editors

The urgent need to address the intertwined challenges of energy sources, carbon emissions, and economic growth has become increasingly apparent in our quest for sustainable development. In this Special Issue, we welcome original research papers, review articles, and case studies that address the following topics:

- Energy transition pathways and their implications for economic growth;
- Assessment of renewable energy technologies and their role in carbon mitigation;
- Analysis of the environmental and economic impacts of different energy sources;
- Modelling the relationship between carbon emissions, energy consumption, and economic indicators;
- Policy frameworks for promoting sustainable energy sources and reducing carbon emissions;
- The role of innovation and technological advancements in fostering sustainable economic growth;
- Socio-economic aspects of energy transition and their implications for different regions and communities;
- Energy efficiency measures and their potential for decoupling economic growth from carbon emissions.
