Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Numerous studies have analyzed the impacts of COVID-19 on the daily life of citizens and the global travel and tourism industry. Most of these studies focus on the current effects and the negative consequences that the pandemic is having on the tourism economy. These studies deeply examine the implications of supply-side from a medium and long-term perspective, estimating the significant reduction in tourism, forecasting employment loss, and profiling new tourists and new offers. However, very few empirical papers explore the emerging signs of tourists’ renewed needs, preferences, new motivations for traveling during the pandemic, the new normal in relation to travel, etc.
