Message from the Guest Editors

Dear colleagues,

This Special Issue of Sustainability is aimed at collecting scientific contributions designed to keep humans in the loop of up-to-date solutions for achieving building energy efficiency in view of urban sustainable development. To this aim, energy and environmental benefits of human-centric building design and operation should be assessed, including occupants' well-being. Moreover, the analysis and leverage of users' energy awareness for more sustainable cities and communities are critical aspects to be addressed.
