Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Sustainability intends to collect an attractive set of papers on the developing topic of executive gender diversity. In particular, the selected papers should collectively contribute to demonstrate (1) whether women executives have a favorable effect on a firm's environmental and social performance; (2) which conditions are needed for women to have a stronger effect; (3) which situations could impede their effectiveness; (4) the role of national culture in facilitating the implication of women executives; (5) whether specific CSR activities are favored by women executives; (5) whether their role has been strengthening as time has passed; etc.

The editor of the Special Issue welcomes all methodological approaches provided they are justified and aptly implemented. For instance, contributors may use case studies; qualitative analyses; single country studies regarding developed or emerging economies; as well as multicountry studies.
