Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue (Food Security and Environmentally Sustainable Food Systems) aims to conduct research on food safety and sustainable food industry along with research on the causal relationship between consumption behaviors of various environmental factors that are developing in the food service industry. In particular, it is expected that meaningful empirical studies will be conducted based on various academic approaches and implications through this issue at a time when the importance of safety in the food/foodservice industry after COVID-19 is most apparent.
