Message from the Guest Editors

This special issue investigates and discusses the relationships between the three fields (sustainability, quality of life and the built environment) and the extent to which the built environment can or should aim to make a positive contribution to these spheres of human life. The issue invites disciplinary specific, multidisciplinary and transdisciplinary contributions, including but not limited to the fields of the built environment, transport, health, psychology, sociology and ethics. Possible topics could include: Paths to sustainability; Visions of sustainability; Built environment and behaviour change; Built environment and nature; Built environment and happiness in an ethical society; Physical and mental wellbeing within a sustainable society; Sustainable happiness; Ethical practices in the built environment.
