Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to collect papers on:

- Analysis of the attitudes of residents in mass tourism areas.
- Studies on growth processes linked to tourism-phobia, touristification and over-tourism.
- Compilation of experiences of social impacts in these destinations: protests, stakeholder analysis, the role of citizen and professional associations, the role of the media, etc.
- Study of plans, regulations, and control measures in the management of crowded tourist areas.
- Demographic and economic changes identified in recent years in mass tourism destinations. Study of cases.
- Transformations and urban actions in mass tourism destinations.
- Environmental impacts linked to intensification processes.
- Analysis of the global and local processes in which mass tourism destinations are framed
- Collection of proposals for new tourism models in the face of the Covid-19 challenge.
- Study of good practices adapted to environmental (climate change) and economic changes (impact of Covid-19).
