Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to be an opportunity to present and collect new proposals and advanced experiences, according to the current orientations in the wide field of Sustainable Design, with a basic objective: help promote the new design culture which takes account not only of the conventional requirements of product and system design, but also of the new requirements needed to pursue an efficient environmental performances; its spread can constitute a key success factor in the implementation of the new industrial paradigms of circular economy and social responsibility.
