Message from the Guest Editors

Special Issue aims at advancing our understanding of how sustainability becomes an intrinsic part of companies' product design and development activities, on both strategic and operational levels. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to: product design and development for circular business models, sustainable product design and development in small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), integration of sustainability with lean or agile product development, sustainability in early product design and development, industrial experiences from implementing product design and development, impacts of digitalization and electrification on sustainable product design and development, design for sustainable behavior, and teaching in sustainable product design and development.
