As many researchers' interest in sustainable health continues to grow due to the recent super-aging, research on the effective analysis and utilization of healthcare and medical data is becoming more important. However, as it is difficult to estimate the impact caused by the leakage of sensitive personal medical information, the use of personal medical information in the deep web is very limited. In order to revitalize various healthcare studies, in-depth research on information distribution between the deep web and the WWW is required. In addition, thorough privacy protection for the sensitive information on the deep web is required. This Special Issue provides a platform for researchers from academia and industry to present their novel and unpublished work in the domain of healthcare data. This will help to foster future research in emerging fields of healthcare data analytics and its applications.
