Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The social environment in which humans live is inevitably affected by the development of technology. The ongoing institutionalization of large-scale investments in social policies to promote sustainable development and economic growth presents many challenges with the creation of necessary capacity and robust systems for effective management of such schemes in all phases of their implementation cycle.

This Special Issue focuses on research on social management systems that are changing with the development of technology. We are interested in submissions utilizing a variety of methodological perspectives, and welcome both original research and review articles.

Potential topics include (but are not limited to) the following: Education technology and management systems; Healthcare technology and management systems; Business technology and management systems; Culture technology and management systems; IT and computer-based social management systems; etc.
