Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The search for solutions, which are sustainable from both an environmental and social point of view but also capable of generating economic profit/benefits, has become important for the tourism sector. This is also due to the ever-increasing demand for greener and more environmentally friendly tourism products. In this context, the tourism sector is more and more oriented towards designing and developing innovative products, initiatives and infrastructures that make use of existing natural solutions and combine natural, cultural and manufactured heritage in a coherent manner; the so-called nature-based solutions.

The Tourism and Hospitality journal is planning a Special Issue to explore the potential of nature-based solutions in tourism and in the following context: mountain, urban, rural and disadvantaged areas.

Studies that use real-time data are particularly welcome. Quantitative studies based on microdata are especially appreciated. Case studies for specific regions, surveys and reviews on topic are also welcome.
