Message from the Guest Editors

Dear colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to focus on COVID-19 prevention and control with a particular public health perspective. Special interest lies in the analysis and descriptions of policies and strategies concerning vaccination in the context of public health, health policy, and health planning with specific focuses on local, regional, and national approaches, as well as new knowledge on vaccination and any aspect of COVID-19 prevention and control.

The topics should centre around studies related to research articles, reviews, and perspectives directly related to COVID-19 measures, including current and future avenues for the prevention of the disease.
