Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Vets and Nutritionists,

It is our pleasure to announce a call for papers for our Special Issue in Veterinary Sciences on “Recent Advances in Horse Nutrition—an Evidence-Based Approach”.

We would like to encourage new and experienced researchers to contribute papers to include practical and clinically useful research that has immediate impact across different levels. Qualitative approaches, research trials, case reports, proof of efficacy or critical reviews from an animal or client perspective and One Health comparative approaches are encouraged.

We welcome submissions dealing with wide aspects, but not limited to the role of nutrition in (i) preventative medicine to maintain health, performance, and welfare, (ii) as a therapeutic tool, (iii) barriers to client compliance, (iv) effect of processing, (v) novel feed ingredients, (vi) feeding management and behaviour, and (vii) grazing and environmental sustainability.
